The Fust and Schoeffer printers' design is the emblem of International Association of Printing House Craftsmen today. "The Official Emblem of The International Association of Printing House Craftsmen, Inc., depicts the combined coats-of-arms of Johann Fust and Peter Schoeffer. It was the first imprint used in a book printed from movable type, appearing as early as 1457 in Fust and Schoeffer's Psalter. Different versions of this design appeared at later dates, but the design of 1457, illustrated above, is our official emblem. It was the first book to have a printed date and the first book with a printer's mark." The inscription is in Latin and reads as follows: . . ." http://www.iaphc.org/about/emblem.html
